WRESTLING CHAMPIONSHIPS DECIDED. A crowd of interested spectators filled the gymnastum of the New-York Athletic Club last evening to witness the final bouts for the amateur wrestling championship of the organization. The contests were at 125, 125 and 145 pounds. The wrestling class is the largest in the club, and wrestling class is the largest in the club, and the men worked hard for this tournament. In the 125-pound contest Richard Stevens and W. W. Gliffilian wrestled ten minutes, the limit, and the referce ordered an extra six minutes. He was still unable to give a decision, and he allowed the men a half-hour's rest, after which Stevens had become stale, and the bout was awarded to Gliffilian. The 135-pound contest was not so exciting W. B. De Haven and S. Scoville, Ir., were the contestants. Both men fell, and after 3 minutes and 55 seconds Scoville threw De Haven, who received a bad cut over the right eye. The 145-pound match brought out F. L. Cooper and A. A. Maurara. This bout caused lots of fun. Cooper was almost twice as large as his opponent and every one thought he would win, but Maurara got a neck hold on him and throw him in 4 minutes and 57 seconds. The prize-winners were as follows:

To force the Controller to make payments, a temporary league, including most of the city, has been formed. The cost of membership in the league has been placed at $500, and the sums paid in are to be placed in a general fund to defray the expenses of mandamus suits, which the contractors say they will soon bring against the city. Several contractors have been selected to begin the mandamus proceedings, and they will be supported with the entire fund in the league's treasury.

OBITUARY.

JOHN H. HYATT. Colonel John H. Hyatt, one of Peekskill's oldest citzens, was buried yesterday afternoon in Hillside Cemetery. He died on Tuesday from heart disease. after an illness of only a few days.

Colonel Hya't was born in Peekskill on February 6, 1815, the son of Justus Hyatt and Elizabeth Brandt. He was educated at the public schools and became a moulder, a carpenter, and then an architect. He early embarked in the foundry business, and became one of the pioneer stove manufacturers of the country. In the early seventees he was made a general inspector in the Public Works Department of New-York City, and occupied a responsible place in the Department. In 15-4, at the age of seventy years, after eleven years in the city's employ, he retired, and has since lived a quiet life at his home. In politics he was a Republican, and had held many offices, but in later years had refused all solicitations to run for office. In religious belief he had always been a Quanter. He was, with one exception, the oldest member in the lodge. He enlisted on September 25, 188, in an artillery company stationed at Fort Gansevoort, at Twelfthest, New-York known as the Jefferson Goards. The next year he was made a first lieutenant in the 38th Regiment. The commission was signed by William H. Seward, Scoretary of State, and Rufus King, adjustant-general. In 18th he was made captain, in 184 heutenant-colonel and in 1884 colonel, his commission being signed by Governor Fenton.
